ORGANIZATION IS THE ONLY HOPE OF AMERICAN FARMER

—FRANK O. LOWDEN

Former Governor Gives His Solution of Agriculture's Life

(Editor's Note: Here is an analysis of the farm situation by former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, one of the foremost authorities on the subject and a potential candidate for the presidency in 1928 on a farm relief ticket. It is Lowden's first interview on the subject in recent months. It is particularly timely now that agriculture relief has become the big issue in Congress.)

BY DAVID DIETZ
NEA Service Writer

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.) American agriculture is so badly out of step with the rest of the nation's life that bumper crops, which spell prosperity and industry and commerce, usually give the farmer only an overstocked market and resultant calamity.

And unless the farmers organize as industrialists and laborers organize, there is little hope of bettering their situation. The increasing population of the world with the consequent demand for more food, makes it imperative that the present status of agriculture be changed.

These are the conclusions of Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who is one of the closest students of farm problems in the country.

The Farmer's Plight.

Lowden sums up the farmer's plight as follows:

The farmer's net return on his capital, for the farm year of 1924-25—the best season the farmer has had in recent years—was only 3.6 per cent.

His net return on his capital for the five years ending with the farm year 1924-25 averaged only three-tenths of one per cent.

These figures, furthermore, do not take into consideration the depreciation of equipment or the depletion of the soil.

When these items are taken into consideration, it means that the farmer's returns have been less than the cost of production.

In other words, the nation's agriculture, over a five-year period, shows a net loss instead of a profit.

"The present situation involves the very life of the nation," Lowden told me recently before leaving in a European trip.

Sees Disaster Ahead

"If the farmer does not get enough return to enable him to keep on producing, disaster will result for everyone."

"The farmer cannot go on producing unless he gets at least the cost of production of the thing he sells."

"The result will be fewer farmers. This is already in evidence, and this trend cannot go on long until there will be a shortage of food, with abnormal and needlessly high prices."

"But in time there will be a second result which will be even more disastrous. That will be the gradual depletion of the soil."

"Agricultural colleges are insisting on the need of conserving the fertility of the soil. The future of agriculture hinges on this."

"But it costs money for fertilizer to save the soil. If the farmer is faced with ruin, he can't buy it, and consequently can't save the soil."

Must Make It Pay.

"The first principle of soil conservation, therefore, must be to make agriculture profitable. When agriculture is depressed, rapid depletion of the soil inevitably follows."

Progress in any industry, Lowden points out, is measured by its approach to stabilization in price. Wild fluctuations in price result in a loss to the community.

"The tendency in America for the last quarter of a century has been toward stabilized prices everywhere except in agriculture."

"This does not mean that the law of supply and demand does not still operate. But elsewhere an effort is made to stabilize prices."

OVER 50,000 CLIMB STEPS TO DOME OF ILLINOIS' CAPITOL BUILDING DURING EACH YEAR

Springfield, Ill., June 26—(AP)—More than 100,000 feet climb the circular stairway to the dome of the Statehouse each year. More than half the 50,000 yearly visitors leave their names scrawled on the outside of the inner dome in defiance of the posted notices of fines and jail sentences for defacing state property.

At least two-thirds of the visitors gaze out over the capital city from the dome's top until they find the spire of Lincoln's tomb, rising still and white against the background of green trees far to the south. And more than 80,000 knees are a bit wobbly when the descent of the perpendicular stairs is completed.

Digging and Drilling Indicate Treasure at Bottom Deep Pit

Halifax, N. S., June 26—The ghosts of Mahone Bay—bay of doubloons, it might be called—are prowling every night now with a frightful rattling of cutlasses.

Their phantom galley—so say the folk roundabout—circles Oak Island, while the piggled swears grewsome oaths mutters old tales of rapine and bloodshed.

For the gold hunters have come once more to Oak Island. The peaceful sanctuary, four miles off the Nova Scotia coast, is to be the scene of mighty engineering operations. The reason is buried treasure, apparently of surpassing richness.

$200,000 Already Spent
The mysterious cache of what Ralph D. Paine called "the true treasure story, par excellence, of the whole Atlantic coast" is to be uncovered. At least the attempt is to be renewed this summer. But so many attempts have been made for the last 131 years—More than $200,000 has been spent already, and the only result is tantalizing clues—the bafflement.

The present venture is under the leadership of Col. Weston of Chester, a retired capitalist whose business acumen is colored by a taste for adventure.

Captain Kidd, of course, is credited with hiding it. Yet if that maligned pirate ever had loot enough to justify such a strong box, it is certain that he never had the men nor the time to construct it.

The presence of the treasure was first discovered in 1795. Three young men were canoeing in Mahone Bay one midsummer day and, landing on Oak Island, stumbled on the clearing with the single great oak in the middle. Its bark was marked with curious figures, and there was a circular sink hole in the turf underneath, 13 feet across. They saw from the mighty branch overhead that once upon a time something heavy had been swung from it as from a derrick.

Found Oak Island.
They began to dig and at 10 feet below the surface came to a heavy oak platform. They pried it up and went down another 10 feet when they came to another layer of oak. They reached still a third platform when they were 30 feet down. Then they found the labor too much for them and looked about for help.

Few persons were then living in the neighborhood and these few could not be paid even to approach the spot. It had been "haunted," they said, within the memory of man. Belief in the spectral ship and riddley around ghostly camp fires at night protected the gold with terrible efficiency. The three lads had finally to give it up.

Some years later a physician from Truro heard the story, raised capital and set a body of workmen to digging. They went down to 95 feet. A layer of oak plank was encountered

At 90 feet a long flat stage was unearthed bearing an inscription which was deciphered to read "ten feet below two million pounds lie buried." Digging was suspended over Sunday and on Monday morning the crew returned to find the pit filled with water nearly to the top.

The builders of the hiding place, it was discovered too late, had led in an elaborate system of drain pipes from the high tide level of the bay. It was an ingenious scheme which worked

BAR ASSOCIATION TO CONCLUDE ITS ANNUAL MEETINGS

Election of Officers on Program of Final Session

Moline, Ill., June 26—(AP)—The annual convention of the Illinois State Bar Association met in final session today planning to adjourn after the election of officers.

Correspondence schools of law were denounced, a new classification of laws was proposed and a better chance for wrongly accused persons to obtain justice was urged in committee reports yesterday.

The organization of a permanent group of many agencies and to be known as the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice was announced by a special committee on law enforcement.

Resolutions urging enactment of legislation giving the supreme court regulatory power over the lower courts were adopted by the delegate lawyers, who convened here Thursday.

Another proposal to the convention was that lawyers not practicing should be deprived of their licenses.

ILLINOIS NORTHERN UTILITIES CO. AND GEORGE MCCLARY GIVEN POWER PROJECT PERMITS IN ROCK RIVER

It was urged by R. Allen Stephen, secretary of the state association.

The delegates gathered last night for the golden anniversary banquet at Rock Island. Edgar Tolman, of Chicago, editor of the American Bar Association Journal, and T. T. Beech, of Lincoln, Ill., one of the organizers of the association in 1877, delivered addresses.

The convention attendance prize last night was awarded John Brennan of Chicago, who has been a member of the association continuously since 1882.

Golf prizes in the tourney Thursday were announced as follows:

First, to Hal M. Stone of Bloomington, who shot the course in 63; second, to R. C. Butler of Chicago, for a score of 87, and third, to William B. Knight of Rockford, for his score of 95.

Langlen Was Unable to Play Her Matches Today

BULLETIN

Wimbleton, Eng., June 26—(AP)—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, temperamental French star, today came near to repeating her sensational performance of Wednesday when she disappointed the Queen of England and a huge crowd by failing to play as scheduled.

Today another great throng, including former King Manuel of Portugal, sat through nearly two hours of substituted matches on the center court while Suzanne took her own time about arriving. She finally responded to urgent phone calls from her French team mate.

She arrived at the stadium attired in her tennis togs and went shortly on the court, where with Jean Borotra as her partner she easily defeated H. I. P. Aitkin and Miss B. C. Brown.

Wimbleton, June 26—(AP)—When her mixed doubles match in partnership with Jean Borotra was called to day at the Wimbledon tennis tournament, Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis ace, failed to appear.

Inquiry at Mlle. Lenglen's hotel brought the announcement that she was with her doctor and that she would be unable to play today in her mixed doubles match against H. I. P. Aitkin and Miss B. C. Brown.

Oil Derrick Disappears in "Blowout" in Texas

Orange, Tex., June 26—(AP)—A practically noiseless "blowout" yesterday caused the 112 foot derrick and drilling machinery of a gulf production company well near here to drop from sight, leaving a crater forty feet in diameter. The crater today is nearly filled with water. Oil men say it is the first blowout of its kind on record.

AUTO ACCIDENT LAST EVE IN FRANKLIN GROVE LAID TO CARELESS IOWA DRIVER

J. A. Ballinger of Des Moines, Iowa, driving an old Ford sedan, was the cause of what might have proven a serious accident on the Lincoln Highway in Franklin Grove last evening about 8:30 when he stopped on the paving to make some repairs to his car. It is said that the car showed no lights and a Chevrolet coupe in which Charles Suter, wife and small baby of Franklin Grove were passengers, crashed into the rear of the stalled car. Neither of the parents was injured, but the baby sustained a bump over the left eye, and was taken to the office of a physician. Deputies from the sheriff's office were summoned to the scene and found three cars, all bearing evidence of the collision. A fourth car had run into the ditch to avoid striking the other machines but was not damaged. Ballinger said that he had purchased the sedan in Chicago yesterday morning and was trying to get to his home in Des Moines. He was without funds and unable to pay the damages to the other two machines. No arrests were made.

SENATOR REED WANTS LEAGUE BOOKS IN PROBE

Want to Get Through, He Tells Wheeler, League Head

Washington, June 26—(AP)—Wayne P. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, was directed today by the Senate campaign funds committee to produce the books of the league for a period as far back as 1917.

That was the year which marked the beginning of the intensive campaign of the dries for enactment of the eighteenth amendment. Chairman Reed said he wanted particularly the books showing the payrolls; the money sent into the states "for campaign purposes, direct or indirect" and the names of all of those who have subscribed $500 or more.

Wheeler told the committee the books were in Washington, and that certified copies were being made, since the originals are in use daily.

Reed said this would take a long time and that the committee could finish with the originals in a single day.

"We want to get through with this," the Missourian said.

Former May Build Dam and Reservoir at Byron, Ill.

Washington, June 26—(AP)—Among licenses granted by the Federal Power Commission are several for California projects and also preliminary plans in case the projects are found feasible by the commission. In the latter list were these:

To George B. McClary of Chicago, for power projects in the Rock River in Ogish and Lee counties near Grand Detour, and in Winnebago County near Latham Park, Illinois, the power to be used for public utility purposes.

To Ray K. Holland, Ann Arbor, Mich., for a project on the Fox River, LaSalle county, Illinois, the 860 horse power to be used for public utility purposes.

To the Illinois Northern Utilities Company of Dixon, for a power development in Rock River near Byron, Ogish County, Illinois involving a dam and a reservoir extending upstream about eleven miles to Rockford. The 1,600 horsepower capacity would be for public utilities.

Eight Paid Fines in Justice Shaulis' Court

The speeder's court has been very active the past few days, eight violators having been brought before Justice J. O. Shaulis for violation of motor law and ordinances. Elmer Chase of Beloit, Wis., paid a fine of $20 and costs for driving a car bearing fictitious license plates. Leon Lacharito paid $10; and costs for speeding; George E. Miller, W. T. Elms, Edwin Levan and Ray Coffeen were fined $3 and costs for failing to observe boulevard stop signs; C. M. Denny was fined $3 and costs for cutting a traffic light; Edward A. Block, arrested by State Automobile Investigator Frank Rosbrook, paid $3 and costs for operating a car bearing fictitious license plates.

Cling to Hope for Aid for Farmer this Session

Washington, June 26—(AP)—Senate supporters of the defeated McNary equalization fee bill agreed today to abandon their move to lay aside all farm relief legislation.

The change in plans was attributed to the statement issued late yesterday by President Coolidge, who urged congress to pass the Tinchin farm credits bill.

While not favoring the Tinchin bill, the McNary group decided not to attempt to block a vote on it in view of the President's request.

JUDGE LEECH WILL PRESIDE IN ROCK ISLAND COUNTY COURT CRIMINAL BRANCH NEXT MONTH

Local Jurist's Fame is Spreading Throughout the State

The popularity of County Judge William L. Leech as a presiding trial judge in criminal cases, has won for him another honor, that of being invited to preside in the county court of Rock Island county several days of next month in the disposition of criminal cases. Judge Leech while attending the annual convention of the Illinois State Bar Association at Moline yesterday, accepted the invitation of Judge John D. Long of the Rock Island county court and State Attorney Benjamin S. Bell to preside.

Several days ago, Judge Leech received a communication from State Attorney Bell, inviting him to preside in the trial of several criminal cases, which have been taken away from Judge Long by the change of venue agreed to by their cases before Judge Leech and Judge Long.

As the opening date for the hearing of the delayed cases, this is the second instance in which Lee county jurists have been called into Rock Island county to preside, Judge Harry Edwards having occupied the bench in the circuit court of that county two years ago at the notorious Looney trial.

Service Men's Car Crashed Into Others

A marine and two sailors driving a Hupmobile touring car, damaged two Ford's just east of Galena avenue on First street at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The driver apparently lost control of his car and crashed into the rear of a new Ford touring car, which was pushed ahead, striking a Ford coupe. Both Ford's were slightly damaged, the touring car receiving the worst of it. It was necessary to jack up the rear of the touring car in order to separate the two machines.

LOCOMOTIVE EXPLOSION CAUSE OF WRECK AND DEATH OF THREE RAILROAD EMPLOYEES THIS MORN

Kingston, Rhode Island, June 26—(AP)—Three railroad employees were killed today when the boiler of a locomotive hauling sixty cars exploded while passing over marsh land near here. The wreckage of the freight train was thrown on the passenger tracks and a few minutes later the New York, New Haven & Hartford's "Cape Codder" from New York for Cape Cod points, crashed into the wreckage.

The locomotive of the passenger train was thrown from the rails and the first car dived into the swamp. Several passengers were slightly hurt. The fact that none was seriously injured is believed to have been due to the fact that none of the upper berths on the flyer was occupied.

The train, which runs only on Saturday mornings, was making its first trip of the season.

The boiler of the freight locomotive was hurled many feet into the swamp. Many of the battered cars of the freight were filled with finished cloth and with bundles of American flags being shipped from the textile cities for the July 4 celebration. For a great distance the track was strewn with oil-soaked flags and bolts of cloth.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined.

DIXON LADIES IN CHARGE SUMMER COLONY IN EAST

Mrs. Frances Grisdale and Miss Orvis Conduct Fine Resort

Dixon people will be interested to learn that two former Dixon girls have engaged in an enterprise in Peterborough, New Hampshire, where they are today holding the formal opening of "Marlarden," a summer colony in the pine woods. Mrs. Frances O. Grisdale, formerly Miss Orvis, of Dixon, is manager, and Miss Julia S. Orvis, who holds the chair of history at Wellesley College, is associated with her.

Marlarden is an estate of 250 acres in the foothills of the White Mountains and was until recently the home of Mrs. Guy W. Currier's famous summer school of the drama and dance. It is situated two miles from Peterborough, a charming old New England village, which houses a summer colony of permanence and distinction.

Cabins for Guests.

Cabins grouped among the pines provide accommodations for sixty to seventy guests. All the cabins are airy, carefully screened, electric lighted and comfortably furnished. The usual plan is three rooms to a cabin. These may be rented singly or an entire cabin shared by a party of three or four.

A few cabins, designed for families, consist of a large living-room with fireplace, two bed rooms and bath. Recreation Studio with its big fireplace, comfortable furnishings, verandas and wide views, and the rustic Rectory are both centrally located.

There is a swimming pool on the Marlarden estate; golf and tennis at the Peterborough Golf Club, where temporary memberships may be arranged; walks and drives for are numerous and beautiful. Garage accommodations are available at Marlarden.

Peterborough is seventy miles by good roads from Boston, twenty from Worcester, Mass., and sixty miles from Keene, New Hampshire. Peterborough may be reached by train from New York, in an overnight journey, or in eight or nine hours by daylight.

Weekly Grain Review

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Faced by evidence piling up that wheat is suffering harvested more rapidly than usual, wheat values this week have suffered a decided setback. Compared with a week ago this morning wheat was 2 1/2c to 3 1/2c lower, 1 1/2c to 1 3/4c off on 1 1/2c to 2 1/4c down, and provisions at 12 to 60c decline.

One of the indications of rapid harvestings of the 1926 domestic crop of wheat is the fact that threshing returns all over the southwest are running much in excess of what has been looked for.

Until near the end of the week, wheat prices were relatively well maintained, numerous traders leaning to the view that as soon as the first rush of the winter crop is ended, general world factors would come into play to the front. This opinion was received a jolt when arrivals of wheat at interior southwestern markets began suddenly to multiply, and were counted far up to hundreds of cars, with forecasts current of still greater increases next week.

Lowest prices of recent years were reached in the corn market. Added to the knock-out of the McNary-Haugen bill, an expected hot wave likely to promote the growth of the new corn crop did much to reduce values. Oats followed wheat and corn.

Provisions have sagged as a result of meat trade slackening, ascribed more or less to the high prices which are being asked.

Butter Market

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Butter markets during the week appeared to be working at cross purposes and therefore definite trends were not clearly established. All markets were fairly steady at the beginning of the week, but operations were of a rather cautious nature, with no evidence of strength nor any real indications of weakness.

The New York market held relatively the firmest position, while those at Philadelphia and Boston were nervous and unsettled. Chicago's opening was firm at an advanced price, but demand was not equal to the heavier receipts and at the close an easier tone was in evidence with prices slightly lower.

Production is holding up well as borne out by statistics. Receipts at the four markets for the week were some 20,000 tons in excess of the previous week and slightly heavier than the corresponding week last year. Receipts at the four markets for the first

24 days of June this year was 962,146

THE SANDMAN—

From the Kansas City Star. The Sandman, bearing on his back His mighty bag of dreams, Comes singing where the shadows meet.

The sunset's fading gleams.

And gentle is his kindly voice, And silent is his tread, As, scorning any lock or key, He seeks each little bed.

And eyes of blue or eyes of brown, Be what they may, On each he lays a rosy dream To tarry till the day.

A rosy dream to show the way Across the field of night To slumber's happy meadows where The always fair and light

And when the dawn steals up the edge Between the earth and sky, They cover up their tracks with sand, And dreams and Sandman fly. —Maude De Vere Newton.

MENU for the FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—Grapefruit sections, scrambled eggs with bacon, bran muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Vegetable soup, croutons, head lettuce with French dressing, baked custard, milk, tea.

Dinner—Bluefish stuffed and baked, scalloped potatoes, buttered new beets, watercress salad, raspberry sherbet, rye bread, milk, coffee.

Although the soup is made with a meat stock a nourishing dessert is needed for the luncheon menu. In stead of straining the soup and serving it clear, shred and mince the vegetables finely and serve them with the broth. This adds bulk to the diet.

Raspberry Sherbet.

One quart raspberries, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 cups water, whites 2 eggs, few grains salt. Look over and wash berries. Sprinkle with sugar and let stand 1 hour. Rub through a sieve to remove seeds adding water as needed. Add lemon juice and turn into mold. Pack in three parts ice to one part salt and let stand until half frozen. Fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff with a few grains of salt. Let stand until frozen and serve in sherbet glasses with one or two choice fresh berries for a garnish. BICYCLE COMES BACK.

The Detroit Motor News says: "We have reached the point where the canny motorist carries a bicycle along so he can ride to work, after he finds a place to park?"

Whether this remark is based upon one or two bicycles and a jest anyone can guess. Whatever the fact may be the beginning of a few bicycles is likely to lead to more, as the suggestion probably is a practical one in such cities as Detroit and Chicago.

The number of automobiles has defeated the object of the men who first used them in driving to office and shop. Street railways met ordinary demands of all workers, if we include the straps, but the automobile meant greater speed and greater convenience.

When thousands of the gas vehicles began surging into the same centers the early advantage disappeared. Parking places were at a premium. Even when they were to be found within reasonable distance of the destination, time was occupied in hunting for them, and time was one of the principle elements in use of the automobile. Now the congestion has become so great that not only does the element of time enter, but also we find the element of distance from the destination. So, here comes the bicycle as a means of finishing the last lap of the mad race.

It is said that many persons among those early to utilize the automobile in driving into Chicago from suburbs now have returned to use of suburban trains. Congestion on the highways has now slowed down the rate of speed that there is little or no gain in using one's own vehicle, only to find a parking problem at the end.

Wider highways, which are advocated in Chicago, will serve to remove one handicap, but the problem of parking only grows with the years and appears to be as far from solution as ever, unless the bicycle is the remedy.

BURIED GOLD.

Gold to the amount of $200,000, buried during days of the War of the Rebellion, has been found in earth in Alabama. The Kentuckian who found the fortune had first found a map among papers in possession of his father. It directed him where to dig, and the directions proved to be perfect.

Since the Civil war there has been much digging for gold, but little of it has been found. During and in years after the war, burial was a favored method for hiding treasure in southern states. We heard of it more in the border states that are nearer to us. Among persons of a generation now old, it did not take much to induce them to dig for supposed buried treasure in Missouri. Maps were found and maps were lost. Either circumstance was enough to start the prospectors out with their spades.

All of this digging was taken as a matter of course. The younger generation sometimes was inclined to believe the diggers were victims of hallucination, because they dug without finding treasure. Yet, the men of that troublous time knew there was gold in the earth in many places, and any kind of a map was worth following up.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Nancy picked up Inco, the china elephant in her arms, and Nick picked up Flops, the toy clown.

Then they followed the Sandman out of Shout-Twe Town, and down the road of Drowsy Land to the tall lighthouse.

Shoozlesnugglesnere, the queer little moon man, opened the gate with a large key and let them out. Then he shut it again and locked it.

Right outside of the blue gate a bright moonbeam shined down to ward the earth like a sliding board.

"Come on," called the Sandman, sitting down and straddling it, his bag of sleepy sand slung over his shoulder. "Wrap your legs around it so you won't fall off—like I do."

So the Twins sat down, and soorily had they touched it when whizzed down they flew, and in about six seconds they had reached the earth.

Just in time too, for a big black cloud went over the moon at that minute and the moonbeam disappeared.

"Now you go that way and I'll go this," said the Sandman. "And here are two tickets the Man-in-the-Moon told me to give you. You should be in bed, but as this is something very special, you may stay up tonight to attend to it. These tickets are for the circus. There is the big tent right there. The show is just beginning."

So the Twins went in and nobody thought it queer to see two children without a grown-up. I suppose, they thought—

But there! The chief thing now is to tell you exactly what happened.

Well, just as the Twins arrived, the elephants came in for their act, holding each others tails with their trunks.

"I couldn't do that," said Inco to Nancy in a low voice. "I haven't any tail!"

"But you could come at the end of the line," said Nancy. "You wouldn't need a tail."

"That's so," said Inco. "After that the elephants did all sorts of things. They played ball and danced, and bowed, and stood on their hands. I mean their front feet, and beat drum with sticks tied to their tails, and played tambourines, and balanced on barrels, and so—"

Everybody clapped so hard at this that Inco said, "I wish I could do that. I think I could if I was a really elephant!"

And then something happened.

There came from somewhere, nobody knew where, a lovely white flash that glittered like a fairy's dress.

White pigeons and doves sat all over it and it was pulled by eight white horses. In it sat a beautiful lady who loved and smiled as she passed.

Everybody cheered, but they would have cheered more if they had known that she was the Fairy Queen.

Instantly a pure white elephant with garlands of real roses appeared walking slowly behind her coach.

On his back was a clown in a white suit, who blew kisses to the Twins.

Inco and Flops had disappeared, but the Twins knew that they had their wish at last.

It seemed to be filled with fat old women being hauled around by pale-faced young men with tired eyes and cruel mouths, and fat old men holding pretty girls tight up to their pouchy old stomachs. It made me rather sick."

"The girl had left me and I stood hesitating to walk across the crowded floor to the door when a fine looking woman came up to me and said: 'Would you like a partner, Miss?'"

"Before I could refuse, the girl that I had met in the park produced from somewhere a splendid looking cap and mumbled a kind of introduction."

He is scarce itself and yet when he holds you in his arms you know that he has nerves of steel covered with roses that ripple and twist like over dazzling teeth and his lean face is lighted with large brown eyes that can be tender and almost cruel in the same breath. His black hair is combed back from his forehead, and I have never seen one of his shining locks awry."

SCHOOL IS OUT

Everything is up-side-down, in every house in everytown. Things that make things look that way are things that make all mothers gray. Kids, of course, are runnin' loose, and mother figures, what's the use to fret and fuss when things go wrong. They'd keep her at it all day long.

Childish voices loudly ring, 'cause youth, ya know, must have its fling. Doin' this an' doin' that till neighbors don't know where they're at. Playin' tag, an' jumpin' rope, it ain't no use to ever hope to quiet down a peppy child, when kids just dose on runnin' wild.

"Please be quiet," mom implores. Racin', tearin', slamm'n' doors. In the house a while, an', then, like a flash, outdoors again. Nothin' fer the tots to do but run around an' ballyhoo. Can't ya guess to hear them shout. Here's the answer—school is out!

A bride may think so—but she never marries the best man.

When vacation time comes along, it's hard for the parents to decide whether to have a real rest—or take the kids along.

A man may be able to come back—but many of them don't, after they've hit somebody with their automobile.

Dad took baby on his lap,
So quiet she would keep.
But, shucks, she kept on howling, till
She cried her pop to a sleep.

This is the time of year when most of us are eating radishes from the grocery store, because of the luck we had with our garden.

Father didn't want to show any partiality, so he bought the baby a bottle, and his wife a second-hand auto.

88 RUNS MADE IN SIX GAMES PLAYED IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Yanks Strengthened Their Hold on First Place in American

Six games in the major leagues yesterday produced 88 runs, an average of almost 15 a contest. The American League scored 45 and the National 43, each circuit playing three games.

The Yankees strengthened their hold on first place in the American by downing the Red Sox twice, 12-2 and 11-4. The Yanks piled up an early lead in the opener, aided by a home run from the bat of Tony Lazzari, his tenth of the season, and in the second encounter Babe Ruth registered his twenty fourth home run. Bob Meusel was injured in a slide to second base in the second contest and was carried from the field.

Red Faber essayed to improve Chicago's second place position, but failed before the slugging of the Browns, who drove him from the mound in the third and continued their assault on Thurston to win, 11-4. Bing Miller, recently obtained by the Browns from the Athletics in a trade, hit a homer, triple and single, while Manager George Sisler recorded four one-base smashes.

Reds Trimmed Pirates Cincinnati gained title to first place in the National League by beating Pittsburgh in a hitfest, 9-8. The Reds obtained 17 safe blows and the Pirates 15. Waner of the world champions had five singles for a perfect batting day. Bressler led the Cincinnati attack with a triple and two singles.

A battle of brothers occurred at Brooklyn where Jess Barnes of the Dodgers outpitched his brother Virgil of the Giants, to win by 7-4. Only six singles were garnered from the delivery of the veteran Jess, while his mates pounded the brother for nine in seven frames, when he was relieved by Chick Davies.

Moran and Bancroft hit homers in another battle of bats at Philadelphia, the Phillies winning from the Braves 8-7. Mogridge went all the way for Boston, but three singles in the ninth defeated him.

Atlantans are making great preparations for the reception of Bobby Jones when he returns from England after his victory in the British open golf championship.

M. C. Mackall, of Minneapolis is new president of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association; J. W. Hughes of Omaha is vice president and Blair Young of Omaha secretary and treasurer. They were elected last night at St. Louis, where the annual association tournament is being held.

The English golfing world is dazzled over the winning of the British open by Bobby Jones of Atlanta at St. Annas. The trophy which he won yesterday is coming to America with the British amateur cup of Jess Sweetser and the Walker Cup, won by a team of which Jones was a member. After Jones came three other Americans, Al Watrous and Walter Hagen, professionals, and George Von Elm, an amateur, in the van of Abe Mitchell, one of Great Britain's most astute players, and a number of other brilliant linksmen. Hence the arrangement.

The United States will have three representatives in competition for the Canadian amateur golf title, beginning Monday at Toronto. C. H. and P. H. Hyde, both members of the Buffalo Country Club, and Gordon Chelaw, from the Hollywood Country Club, California, are entered with at least 100 Canadians. Donald D. Carick, the dominion's 20 year old holder of the title, is defending it.

A. U. Should Locke accept this offer, he would in all probability, have Loren Murchison, Jackson Scholz and other crack sprinters as competitors. Johnny Weismueller, world's free style swimming champion who was kept out of the winter-spring indoor competition by illness, has resumed training and will defend his title at the N. A. A. U. championships in Philadelphia July 28-31.

BROKEN HEARTS of HOLLYWOOD

BY EDWARD CLARK

Copyrighted by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD" with Louise Dresser is a Warner picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Betsy Terwilliger and Hal Chutney, movie aspirants in Hollywood, meet disheartening experiences. Marshall, reputed to be responsible for many of the "broken hearts of Hollywood," is attentive to Betsy, arousing Hal's jealous anger. Hal is seriously hurt; Betsy vainly fights to support both. Desperate, she offers a proposal to McLain, noted screen villain, but he befriends her, giving her a part in his picture. Virginia Perry, erstwhile star, now a failure, discovers that she is Betsy's mother but doesn't reveal it for fear of blighting the girl's career.

Most of the work Betsy had done so far was preliminary and minor. Now, after two weeks of activity, the day was at hand when the first of the "big scenes" was to be shot, a scene in which the burden of the emotional work would fall upon Betsy.

The action—which was laid on the foggy banks of the Thames in London, of a misty night—showed an aristocratic young girl, in befriending a drunken derelict "sleeping it off" on a bench in the rain, discover that the creature is none other than her own long lost mother. Despite the wretched woman's degraded condition the fine young girl takes her to her bosom. The scene marked the emotional summit of the whole play.

It was a scene well calculated to try the skill of a seasoned and gifted actress; for one so callow as Betsy, only a miracle would give the required profundity. Nevertheless, out of deference to McLain, the director resolved to try with the utmost patience and enthusiasm to bring Betsy to great heights. He read and reread the scene to her, and drilled and redrilled his conception of it into her, trying to infuse her with the proper approach. McLain, meantime, stood aside, talking to Virginia. "You're looking pretty good, Virginia. Do you know, I've been wondering if the strange similarity of the story we're filming to the real story of your life has had an influence over you?"

The director leaped from his chair and shouted.

Virginia colored so vividly, and moved away so quickly without replying, that McLain scratched his head in mystification. Thereafter, he fell to thinking deeply, and watching.

Ready to rehearse, the director sent Virginia and Betsy upon the set, while the electricians tried and trained their lights and all the other subordinates made nonchalant preparations for the actual grinding. But the call of "Camera" was long, long time away, it quickly became apparent, after the rehearsal, when McLain, the producer, and the director alike exchanged depressed and hopeless looks over the inferior quality of Betsy's acting in her first chance at a really big scene.

Time after time the director, with consummate patience for one of his clan, put the girl through her paces, while Betsy grew more tired, more discouraged, and more scared at the realization of her inadequacy. The climax of the director's patience came the twelfth time the rehearsing of the scene reached its climax.

As Betsy, in colorless tones and with but a stiff display of emotion, exclaimed "Mother!" and thrust her arms out woodenly, the director leaped from his chair, shouted "Oh, HEAVENS!" at the top of his lungs, then fired his megaphone at a grinning electrician high on a steel rafter.

Betsy had by now reached an acute point of stage fright; the temperamental tantrum of the director scattered the last vestige of her hope, despite Virginia's whispered encouragement. But the director, after a brief confab with McLain, resolved upon one more try; he proceeded to show Betsy exactly how he wanted the scene played.

Betsy tried to watch him and mimic him and catch the spirit of the pantomime, but with the score of hardboiled onlookers, from prop hand to continuity clerks, and with the accumulated consciousness of her responsibility, she made a sorry and weebegone figure standing there.

"Do it—so!" He shook the glass roof with his shriek of "Mother!" and knocked the breath out of Virginia as he clapped her to his paunch.

So Betsy tried again—and her last attempt was worse than her first, as was but natural under the harrowing circumstance. The director's patience was at its far end; "You're through!" he bellowed to Betsy; and then to McLain and the studio at large. "It's no use. We'll have to get some one else for the part. By cripes, I'd have to be a miracle man to make this female cigar store Indian emot!"

Thus were all her air castles sundered in bitter failure! This was the sad story she would have to carry home to Hal, all the world down about their ears, and black night and poverty and want engulfing them again. Dizzy and faint, and in utter despair, she started to stumble off the set. But Virginia grabbed her, at the same time detaining the irate director.

"Let me take her in hand a minute. I think I can make her do what you want. She's just scared to death now," she pleaded.

McLain, crossing over at the moment and looking sharply at Virginia, backed up her plea. In the end the director assented, though with bad grace. "Hurry up," he ordered. "We've lost too much time already, and I think you might as well save yourself the trouble, Virginia. The little girl is nice and can do in certain parts, and I'm sorry for her—but she just doesn't know life enough to put over this big scene, that's all."

But Virginia hushed him, and drew the weeping Betsy away to a quiet and unseen corner of the studio, where for ten minutes she worked and talked and petted her back to her normal frame of mind. "You're just tired out, child, and excited. You can do this, I know, after I tell you a little story."

McLain, who had come to the nook with them, spoke up softly, shaking his head with a queer smile. "Now I know," he said.

Virginia left Betsy quickly and came and stood face to face with McLain. "What do you know, Walter?" she whispered, pleading, so low that only he could hear. "Now I know whom she resembles, Virginia. He took hold of Virginia's hands with both of his, impulsively, and drew her to him and kissed her—the friendly mark of respect of artists. "Good old Virginia, you may be a bit shabby on the outside but you've got a heart of gold. Don't worry, your secret is safe with me," he whispered, also so low that only Virginia's ears heard. And Virginia's eyes were shining with divinely inspired light, as she testified, "You're a good sport, Walter. God bless you. Now go, and leave us alone."

He went, thrilled through and through with the stark human tragedy and drama that had been unbarred to him since the night of Betsy's arrival. "The pity is," he muttered to himself, "that if one were to screen such a story as this, no audience would believe it could ever happen in real life. They'd say it was the exaggeration of the movies. That is what screen hokum. Oh, Lord!" And he went his way mourning and marvelling.

Meanwhile, Betsy was giving rapt attention now to Virginia, as the latter sat on the floor beside her, clasping her hands hungrily and looking up into her face. Betsy felt peculiarly drawn out of herself by those sad yet gloriously triumphant eyes. The little girl who had never remembered her mother, felt now without knowing it the most potent and heavenly of maternal influences.

"The real secret of good acting, dear Betsy, is the faculty to be able to project yourself into a part as though it is really happening to you in true life. Now just imagine," Virginia paused, gulped a little, and collected herself with an effort—"that I am your real mother. You have just discovered it. You were taken from me when you were but a child, by an unfeeling court and law, that couldn't see beneath the surface of things. They called me wild—and said I went around with other men, but before God, Betsy, it isn't so. Before the world, dear, your father posed as a kind and considerate man. But before us alone—you, my precious baby, and me—he was a selfish brute. He beat me, and denied me not only simple pleasures but the commonest needs of body and soul. Then through circumstantial proofs that meant nothing, he cast me off, took you away, and told you that I was dead."

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN AND FAY MILBURN buy a home shortly after their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL AND VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

PAT AND MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose marriage is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:

John, in love with his wife but a romantic individual, was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to Washington to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returned John told her of some of his actions, but she is so hurt at his recital of a little reunion with DOROTHY FRANKS, now a stage star, and an old flame of his, that he is silent about some of his wilder escapades.

Fay is always fearful that John will get into some kind of trouble that will ruin their happiness, but John thinks she just doesn't understand him. It is left to MRS. BLOUGGETT, a gossiping neighbor, to tell her of John's coming home drunk one night and creating a scene on the front lawn, and to MRS. BIXBY, another scandal-monger, to tell of John's going out with ELEANOR MASON, whom Fay dislikes and suspects of trying to captivate her husband.

Fay, angry and bitter, orders Mrs. Bixby out of the house, and when John comes home late, and with liquor on his breath, there is a violent quarrel. John, maddened because Fay will not accept his explanations, says it would serve her right if he went out "on a real tear," and starts to leave the house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXXVI

JOHN STRODE determinedly out of the room and did not pause until he came to the coat closet off the vestibule, where he grabbed his hat and slipped on it viciously on his head. But Fay had followed him. Nothing he could have done could have served to anger her more than this rude withdrawal.

"Where are you going?" she said, and there was in her voice a peculiar quality that warned John of the desperate emotional pitch she was working up to.

"I'm going out—unless you change your tactics and give me my day in court."

"If you go out, you needn't come back—I warn you." Fay's face had gone bloodlessly white and hysteria was making her tremble all over.

"Well, then," said John, surrendering. "I won't go. I don't want any scenes; I'm tired of cheap melodrama. But at least give me a chance to explain my actions before you pass sentence."

He hung his hat back on the peg, and Fay without a word turned away from him and went upstairs. He could hear her sobbing as she walked up the steps, her breath coming in great gasps. His first impulse was to follow her, to take her in his arms and assure her of his love, but he checked himself, fearing to hurt her so. But an instant's reflection stayed him; better, he thought, to let her have her cry—it would do her good. Then, perhaps, there would be a better opportunity to explain later.

And he wandered into the kitchen, where their unserved dinner lay cold, and attempted to eat a morsel of steak. But he found it impossible, and a little later he staggered back to the living room where he sat staring into the empty fire place, agitatedly consuming cigar after cigar.

"I think that same caution," she remarked significantly, "might apply to the advertising profession."

"I do not go to bed until he was asleep, that Fay was asleep, and the next morning at breakfast he tried to tell her the whole story. But Fay had thrown around her a few words which he found impossible to penetrate, and it seemed to him as he sat across from her at the table that he was breakfasting with a stranger.

"Well, he inquired, halting in his explanation of how Eleanor had called him up to fill in at the party. 'Aren't you interested?' and Fay shook her head.

"No," she said, with great weariness. "I'd rather forget it."

"Very well, then," and John shut up like a clam.

Still smarting under Fay's silent rebuke and her new and strange attitude, he went to his room and found a note pinned to his door. It was from Paul, a friend of John's, and it read:

"John, I've been thinking about you a good deal lately. I've been wondering how you are getting on. I hope you're happy. I've been thinking about you a good deal lately. I've been wondering how you are getting on. I hope you're happy."

Davidson, always saying or doing the strange, the unexpected, introduced John as "a discreet young man, as interesting as he is handsome, a girl," and laughter broke from both the female visitors.

"Mollie and Joyce," Paul went on, "are both married. They're really nice girls, John, but every once in a while they get tired of cooking meals at home and call me up. Then there's nothing to do but for little Paul to rustle a dinner and an agreeable male."

"Tonight he seems to have outdone himself on both scores," said the girl who was Joyce, an elegantly tall and slender figure in clinging green silk.

Mollie, who was strikingly dark and of almost boyish build, a tall which gave her a decidedly oriental appearance, pouted. "Now there you go, Joyce." She looked pointedly at John. "You know how I adore auburn hair."

"Don't fight over him, ladies, don't fight," Paul begged. "Can't you contrive to get excited over me?" John, he went on, turning to Mollie, "I've made the fatal mistake of inviting too interesting a man. I knew it would happen sooner or later," he exclaimed tragically. "Never mind, Paul," Mollie went over to him and kissed his cheek.

"Thank you, fair one," said Paul. "I take it that calls for a drink. Am I right?"

"Paul," Mollie laughed, "you are positively psychic."

During the meal John glowed pleasantly under stimulating conversation. They discussed plays, books, the "super-realists"—whom John considered wastefully, a point on which Mollie alone disagreed with him—and said complimentary things about Davidson's choice of foods.

Quite forgotten for the time were Fay and their recent unpleasant relations. The most charming thing about this little party, John thought, was the fact that there were no questions asked by anyone. He did not know Joyce's and Mollie's last names, nor did they ask him his. He said a short silence once to say to him, "You are married, John, I can tell that," and he laughingly admitted it.

Interesting looking bottles began to make their appearance from a linen closet which was Paul's "cellar," and Davidson concocted strange drinks for them, exhibiting a noisy pride in his ability as a bartender.

Later they all piled into Paul's huge sport roadster and drove for miles beneath the late summer moon to a beachhouse, where they danced for hours and where Paul kept the party enlivened by frequently resorting to his pocket flask. And throughout the evening John kept turning over in his mind the thought that it served Fay right. She had no business treating him as if he were a dirty villain; if she had been fairer, he would be home right now instead of where he was.

Returning, Joyce, who was sitting in his lap, sleepily put her arm around him and snuggled her face up to his. He wondered how Paul could drive with so much liquor in him. Rounding a sharp bend in the road, they became aware of an approaching car, the lights of which were shooting around the curve, and Paul cautiously slowed down to avoid a collision. The other car passed them, a touring car full of merry-makers, and John heard someone shout, "Hello there, Paul!"

The voice was a familiar one and he said, "Who was that, Paul?" "Noel Boyd," Paul answered shortly. "I recognized him and Vera."

Fay was asleep when he got home.

It is understood that another operation will be necessary in about ten days or two weeks. He is at Rochester, at the Mayo Brothers hospital. Senator Wright has appeared here several times before large and appreciative audiences all of whom will regret to learn of his illness.

Mr. A. B. Naylor and daughter Miss Mary left Sunday morning for Dunkirk, Iowa for a visit at the home of his daughter Mrs. Ralph Canals and to become acquainted with his little granddaughter.

and not wanting to disturb her, he went to bed in another room, wondering what sort of explanation he would offer her in the morning.

"I am out with Paul Davidson last night," he told her at breakfast, and as she did not seem inclined to question him further, he let it go.

That. Her resentment toward him still seemed to be smoldering, and as he rode down to the office he felt some recrimination he wasn't acting fair, "for himself, the thing to do was to be perfectly square with Fay from now on."

Some days later there was dinner for the "cheefes," and Fay, learning that Clara was in town, included her in the invitation.

Dick, John concluded at sight of him, was getting much heavier, and the air of solid prosperity about him seemed to be increasing. "George!" John exclaimed, "taking his hand, 'there must be a lot of sick people. You look like a bloated plutocrat. What's your tailor?'"

Dr. Menefee smiled without an answer, and Fay signaled that dinner was ready.

"Well, Clara," Margaret said to her younger sister, "you might as well tell the Milburns now."

"Why, what's all this?" John asked. "Holding out any secrets, Clara?"

Clara smiled faintly. "Nothing much, John. I'm merely getting a divorce."

"Merely? I didn't know such things were considered so trivial. Fay, completely surprised, said, 'Goodness, Clara, what's it all about?' and added quickly, 'Forgive me, I didn't mean to appear too curious.'"

"Oh, that's all right, Fay. Clara is simply impossible to get along with, so I'm quitting—that's all."

"That isn't all," Margaret put in with some heat. "Fay, the way that man fooled her and lied to her and misrepresented things generally was positively shameful. I'm surprised that Clara was able to put up with him so long."

"How terrible!" Fay murmured and John declared, "I never could see Clara Lane for dust, anyway, Clara."

"John," Fay remonstrated, "you have no right to say things like that."

"Can't help it, Fay. Now that Clara's getting rid of him, I can tell her that he impressed me as a four flusher from the beginning."

"He was pretty much that," Clara admitted.

"In the first place," Dick supplemented, "he represented himself as a fairly prosperous broker, and he didn't have any more business than a back rabbit. He and Clara got home from their honeymoon to find creditors besieging them from every side. He was all front, Lane was."

"What are the grounds, Clara?" asked John.

"Non-support and cruelty. There's the matter of separate residence to be taken care of before I bring suit."

"It serves me right, Margaret," Clara said contentedly. "For marrying before you did and upsetting your plans. Doesn't it, Fay?"

John looked curiously at his wife for Fay had been the first to suggest to him that Clara was playing a rather mean trick on her sister. But Fay laid her hand comfortably on Clara's and said nothing.

They discussed Clara's plans for a divorce during the remainder of the meal and then, when dinner had been cleared away, Dick and Clara got up to talk about the medical profession, and John found that a good deal of the old irrepressible Dick had been lost in this keen, successful young doctor.

"Dick," he said with a despairing shake of the head, "you're getting positively reactionary. All I hear is ethics, and six per cent bonds."

"The necessities of the profession, John," he smiled. "I have to be careful what I talk about. Have to be careful, even about taking a drink. You know—"

But Fay interrupted. "I think that same caution," she remarked significantly, "might apply to the advertising profession," and her eyes, as she turned them away to avoid John's sharp, inquiring look, were just a little watery.

The Woman's Club carnival held on the Main street last night was a most decided success and the committee who had the affair in charge are to be congratulated upon their untiring efforts to make it the success that it really was. The committee consisted of Miss Maude Conlon, chairman, Mrs. Minnie Brown, Mrs. Ruby Reigle, Mrs. Hannah Conlon, Mrs. Elizabeth Durkes and Miss Clara Lahman. About twenty booths all prettily decorated lined the main street, which made one feel sure that they were attending a carnival or real note.

The costumes worn by the various young ladies striking equally as attractive. After the announcements made by F. D. Kelley the cries of "Hot Dog," "Confetti," "Right this way to see the Fat Lady," "Have Your Fortune Told Here," "Come see the Snake Charners," "Orange Aid," "Hamburgers right here," "Ice Cream Sandwiches," "Come and be made beautiful," were heard from the various booths by very efficient barkers, until one could hardly hear themselves think for the noise they made.

The midway was thronged with people from early in the evening until late at night. It is estimated that about 1000 people were present and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Some of the special attractions are worthy of more than a few words, such as the Snake Charners, Madam Mystery, which proved to be Mrs. J. H. Lincoln. She carried her part so well that she was asked by several how long she had been over from India and how she as-able to tame her snakes so well. The Beauty Parlor, presided over by Madam DeBeautie, Miss Ma Howard and her helpers, Misses Dorothy Durkes and Melba Phillips did splendid work in making everybody handsome before the evening was over. The Gypsy Fortune Teller, Madam DeFrah (Mrs. Fred Kreib) did a rushing business and made many happy by telling them some bright futures. The Fat Woman (David Weigle) was a most complete success, and furnished much fun. The two policemen, Frank Senger and Fred Gross, in old time costumes were the joke of the crowd, and Judge W. L. Reigle who did some splendid work in placing fines and Mrs. H. W. Dysart, R. C. Gross and Mrs. Gust Reinhardt, Horace

We hope in the near future to publish a history of the Brethren of this community.
